WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1877 THE second birthday of the Princess Victoria Kawekiu Kaiulani Kalaninuiahilapalapa Kaleiohawaii daughter of Her Royal Highness Miriam Likelike and Hon, A. S. Cleghorn, was celebrated yesterday by a grand luan at Waikiki.

The occasion was honored by the presence of His Majesty the King and a large proportion of the persons most distinguished in official and social life in Honolulu, including diplomatic and consular representatives and officers of the Limier and Jamestown

The character and abilities of our Envoy and the well known friendly disposition of Her Majesty's Government, combine to give assurance that all questions at issue will be settled in a manner consistent with the interests and honor of both countries.

By a reference to the United States Debt Statement, which we print among our foreign news, it will be seen that the National Debt was reduced during the month of August $3,869,538.75. The net amount of the reduction for the year ending September 1st, 1877, was $39,712,100, while for the preceding year it was $30,626,800. A Government which, even in the hardest of hard times, can pay off its debts at the rate of from thirty to forty millions of dollars a year may be considered to be in a tolerably sound financial condition.

WE hope none of our readers will fail to notice the communication we publish to-day from a correspondent on Maui, giving an account of the meeting held last Wednesday evening at Wailuku, on behalf of the Hawaiian Telegraph Company. The importance of this enterprise to the future development of this country, seems to us too evident to require any lengthened comment at our hands. We are informed that some five miles of the line, viz : from Makawao to Haiku is already actually constructed. It is now proposed that the same be immediately extended via Kahului, Wailuke, and Waikapu to Lahaina. The character of the men engaged in the enterprise render it reasonably certain that the connection will be made with the latter place at no distant day. This being once successfully accomplished, the question of connecting Maui with the other Islands and with Oahu in particular will become merely a question of time, and, in our opinion, not a very long time either. It is our intention at an early day to refer to this subject more in detail.

By the W. H. Meyer and Una, we have San Francisco papers to September 29th. There was no material change in the position of affairs at the seat of war. There appears to be considerable doubt however about the truth of the reported Turkish victory at Biela.

The question of entering upon negotiations looking to peace is reported to have been under discussion at a meeting of Cabinet Ministers in St. Petersburg.

Abundant rains have fallen in many of the worst famine districts of India, and the crop prospects were improving.

Great excitement and uneasiness exists in political circles in France, as a result of the recent manifesto of President McMahon.

The celebrated astronomer Leverrier is dead A destructive fire occurred on the 24th of September, in the Patent Office Building at Washington, resulting in extensive damage to the building and the destruction of many thousands of models. The public books and records contained in the building were mostly saved, as were also many revolutionary and other relies of inestimable value.

An eastern bound train on the Union Pacific Railroad was boarded and taken possession of by a band of some twelve or thirteen robbers, at a place called Indian Springs, and plunder to the amount of over $60,000 successfully carried off.

THOSE of our readers who are interested in Europeon affairs will not fail to notice the remarkable address of President McMahon to the French electors, an abstract of which appears to-day among our foreign news. Did we not dislike to use slang, especially when treating of important public affairs, we should be tempted to say that the one word which most fully and fitly characterized the whole perfermance, was "cheek." For a man who occupies the nominal position of President of a Republic, to tell the voters, in substance, that the only way to secure peace and harmony in the government is to vote to sustain him and his administration.

is, to say the least of it, decidedly cool. When, however, we come to consider that the men whom his fellow citizens are thus called upon to vote against are Republicans in reality and by conviction, and that they are to be rebuked at the polls for the very reason that they are such, and would, if in power, seek to make France a Republic in reality as well as in name; the real force and bearing of the Presidential manifesto becomes apparent.

Notwithstanding the many acts of injustice and folly by which his administration has been marked, we have been thus far disposed to believe that the Marshal-President was simply a somewhat narrow minded and wrong headed man, whose military education and life had rendered him incapable of entering into the real spirit of Republican institutions. and who was to a great extent under the control of a set of re-actionary and anti-republi-

The policy pursued by his administration of late, however, looks very much as though in case the nation returned an adverse maprity at the next election, he would be prepared, if he saw a reasonable hope of success, n overthrow the Republic, either in the inerests of the exiled Bonapartes or of some kind of military dictatorship of which he should be the head. The Republicans of France have never had greater need for firmness and wisdom than at the present time, but we believe they will be equal to the mergency, and that whether in victory or in defeat, they will show to the nation and to the world a spirit, and bearing worthy of states-

A visit we made a few days since to the Government Reform School for Boys, has suggested to our mind the question; why should there not be some similar institution provided That the boys' school has done, and is still doing a good work, is a fact so generally known and admitted as to require no discussion at our hands. Even in an economic sense, leaving all higher considerations out of account, we believe the present Reform School is worth to this Kingdom more than all it costs. But in a matter of this kind we have no right to leave higher considerations out of account. The difference to the community between a young man growing up idle, deprayed and vicious, and one who is acquiring habits of industry, sobriety and thrift is not to be measured by the difference in their pro- s. c. ALLEN. ductive capacity, or to be expressed by the statement that one is a producer and the other a consumer. This idea is, to a certain extent at least, recognized in the management of the existing Reform School, whose object, as we understand it, is not only to train up the inmates of the institution in habits of useful industry, but at the same time to impart to them a plain but substantial education, and so far as possible, establish them in such sound ideas and habits as shall tend to make them in other respects useful and respectable members of society. But if such an institution, conducted on such principles, is really needed here for boys, which we think, hardly any one qualified to judge will deny, can it be fairly said that the same or something similar

The lack of proper home influences and sound parental discipline in a large proportion is not equally needed for girls?

of native families is a matter of common notoriety, and the disastrons results of such a state of things are quite as apparent in the female as in the male portion of the rising generation. That there are considerable numbers of girls who, for their own good and for the good of society, ought to be put under some stricter and better restraint than that provided by their parents and friends, is just as true and just as evident as that there are ses | silude to the attack of the Advertiser on him- | boys similarly situated. The danger of wayward and untrained girls growing up into depraved and vicious women is quite as great as that of boys, under similar circumstances, developing into hoodlums and criminals; and the danger to society from the former class is in some respects even greater than from the latter. There has been considerable said in our papers lately about the "moral tone" of society in this community. The moral tone of any society, with any claims to be considered we not only ought not, but we cannot, afford to leave any, no matter how humble their station, to grow up in ignorance or vice for want of proper restraint and discipline. To meet the want we have referred to, there is needed an institution to which suitable cases can be committed in such a way as to give as full legal control over them as would be exercised by a parent or guardian, and with full HAW. BARK "R. C. WYLIE," nower to maintain that control without moles ation or interference from outside parties, whether relatives or otherwise, until such time as they should either be of full age or should in the judgment of the proper authorities be fitted to discharge their duties as mem-

hers of society.

Of course we do not claim that the proposed institution should be in all respects an exact duplicate of the one now in existence. No doubt the plan and organization of the latter would require important modifications to fit it to secure the best results, in the case of young persons of the other sex. But that an institution is needed, which should do for a large class of our girls, substantially the same work which the present Reform School aims to do for a corresponding class of boys, ap-pears to us sufficiently evident. We hope the next Legislature may be induced to take the matter up in carnest, and make some suitable provision for supplying the want we have in-dicated.

Murder on the High Seas.

If the following, which we copy from the Alta, is authentic, an individual quite well known in this part of the world has at last closed his earthly career, and in a manner quite appropriate.

"Captain Hayes of the schooner yacht Lotus, which left this port October 9th, 1876, for the Samo-an Islands, was murdered in March last by the cook, a Dutchman, who shipped in Samoa as cook and sea-man. The Lotus left Bonham Island, one of the Marchall Group, bound for Aborn, one of the same group, about 120 miles southwest. Six days after she came back, and the following information was obtained from the way actions. she came back, and the following information was obtained from the man acting as mate. The second day out the Captain apoke to the man at the wheel, who was the cook, about his steering. Some alterestion followed, when the Captain went below. When he came up the companion—way, some time after, the man let go the tiller and struck Captain Hayes on the head with the crutch belonging to the main boom. He fell, and immediately expired. No firearms of any kind were found on him. The seting mate at that time was below, sleeping. The vessel returned to Bonham as soon as possible. The Captain was buried at sea. The Maggie Johnston arrived at Bouham the latter part of March. The matter was explained to Captains Bliven and Henry, and it was found that the mate, not having signed any articles or papers of agreement to bind himself to the vessel, had no control over her at all. Rumors about her guing away to other islands in other hands got about, which caused Mesers. Dopelle & Co., a got about, which caused Messra. Oppelle &Co., a large German firm there, to ask Captain Bliven and Henry, as American citizens, to do something in regard to the matter. The only thing they could do was to deliver the vessel's papers to Copelle & Co. for ante keeping, until her owner in San Francisco could communicate instructions. These times the could communicate instructions. for safe keeping, until her owner in San Francisco could communicate instructions. Theaeting mate was left in charge, and did everything possible to fix things up. An inventory of all goods on board was taken, and all were stored in Copelle & Co's. warehouse. The vessel was to be moored to a 1600lb anchor, rails unbent and put ashore in the warehouse. All this was not completed when the Maggie Johnston left, on May 15th but it was expected that everything would be fixed on that day.
